The Russet Shoe,

Boston Advertiser. The russet shoe is to be worn by men of all degrees of dignity this summer, for the reason that it is cooler and does not require to be dressed every day, as does the oil leather boot. For some years the dignified classes have hesitated, but this summer all restraint is to be thrown aside, and the bright-colored shoe is to be in vogue. It has many things to commend it, wherein it is unlike the green which the ladies are using in their summer dresses, to their own ill looks and the dismay of former wellwishers.

Andubon in Indiana,

While New York is raising a statue to Andubon it is well to note that there still stands in our neighboring city of Henderson the shell of an old mill where the great naturalist worked in his days of obscurity. Though he was a long resident of Henderson, it is said that not a copy of his great book on birds was ever sold there,
